The fund selects undervalued companies from around the world, including emerging markets, with attractive risk-reward for long-term investors. The fund is suitable for those with at least a five year investment horizon. Subscriptions are made in fund units and not directly in stocks or other securities. The benchmark reflects the fund's investment mandate. Since the fund is actively managed, the portfolio will deviate from the composition of the benchmark.

Monthly commentary, August 2024

The global equity market was roughly flat in August with some intra-month volatility.

The Federal Reserve signalled that it is time to start adjusting the economic policy after assessing that inflation is on a sustainable downward trajectory. While the timing and quantity of any future interest rates cuts remain unknown, it is widely assumed that the first cut may happen as early as September. While the consensus view is that there will be several cuts over the next year, we are surprised at how little attention is being paid to various inflationary forces around the world at present. However, we continue to aim for a portfolio construction in the fund that can deliver attractive results in a wide range of macro scenarios.

SKAGEN Global underperformed its benchmark index in August. The fund's top three absolute performers were Edwards Lifesciences, Moody's and Abbott Laboratories. The medical device company Edwards Lifesciences, which specialises in heart valves, bounced back from oversold levels after the disappointing report in July, but the company may not be entirely out of the woods yet. Moody's benefited from market expectations of lower interest rates driving higher bond issuance. Abbott Laboratories gained some ground after being held back by what we consider a flawed lawsuit pursued by trial lawyers in the US who notoriously abuse the American legal system.

The three worst performers in absolute terms were Dollar General, Alphabet (Google) and DSV. Dollar General lowered guidance for the year as the US low-income consumer remains financially fragile and competition from Walmart is stiffer than expected. Alphabet pulled back in sympathy with the tech complex that retreated across the board. DSV fluctuated on the back of rumours about the status of the DB Schenker transaction.

We will comment more on portfolio changes at quarter end. As always, we stay reactive to new data points and evolving fundamentals. The portfolio profile and valuation level continue to look attractive for investors with a long-term mindset.
