Investment strategy

Subscriptions are made in fund units and not directly in stocks or other securities. The benchmark reflects the fund's investment mandate. A medium-high risk class rates the potential losses from future performance at a medium-high level. Other risks materially relevant to the PRIIP not included in the summary risk indicator: Event risk, liquidity risk, operational risk, counterparty risk, derivatives risk and currency risk. In addition, the value of your payout may be affected if your local currency is different from the fund's currency. This product does not include any protection from future market performance so you could lose some or all of your investment.

Portfolio manager commentary, May 2026

Global equity markets rose in May, led by renewed strength in technology and semiconductor stocks. The fund delivered strong relative performance during the month, supported by stock selection and increasing market recognition of value in several of our portfolio positions.

The main positive contributors were Hyundai Mobis, Lenovo and Siltronic. Hyundai Mobis performed strongly as investors continued to recognise the company's significant asset backing, governance improvement potential and attractive position within the Hyundai group structure. The market has also increasingly focused on the company's longer-term optionality in robotics, both as a key component supplier and main shareholder of Boston Dynamics.

Lenovo rallied on solid operational development and continued investor interest in AI-related infrastructure demand. We trimmed our position in Lenovo during the month, following a share price increase in excess of 180% since position initiation in December last year.

German wafer producer Siltronic also re-rated sharply as the market began to price in improving supply /demand dynamics in silicon wafers. The position reached our target price during the month and was closed.

Methanex, one of the fund's largest positions, was the main detractor, although the negative contribution was limited in a month where the fund delivered a positive absolute return. Tensions in Iran had previously supported energy and methanol prices, as Iran is one of the world's major methanol producers. As tensions eased during the month and hopes of a resolution increased, the share price came under pressure. We continue to see Methanex as well positioned in the current environment, with attractive upside from normalised earnings power and improved cash flow generation over time.
